

NET NEUTRALITY REPEAL BY THE NUMBERS

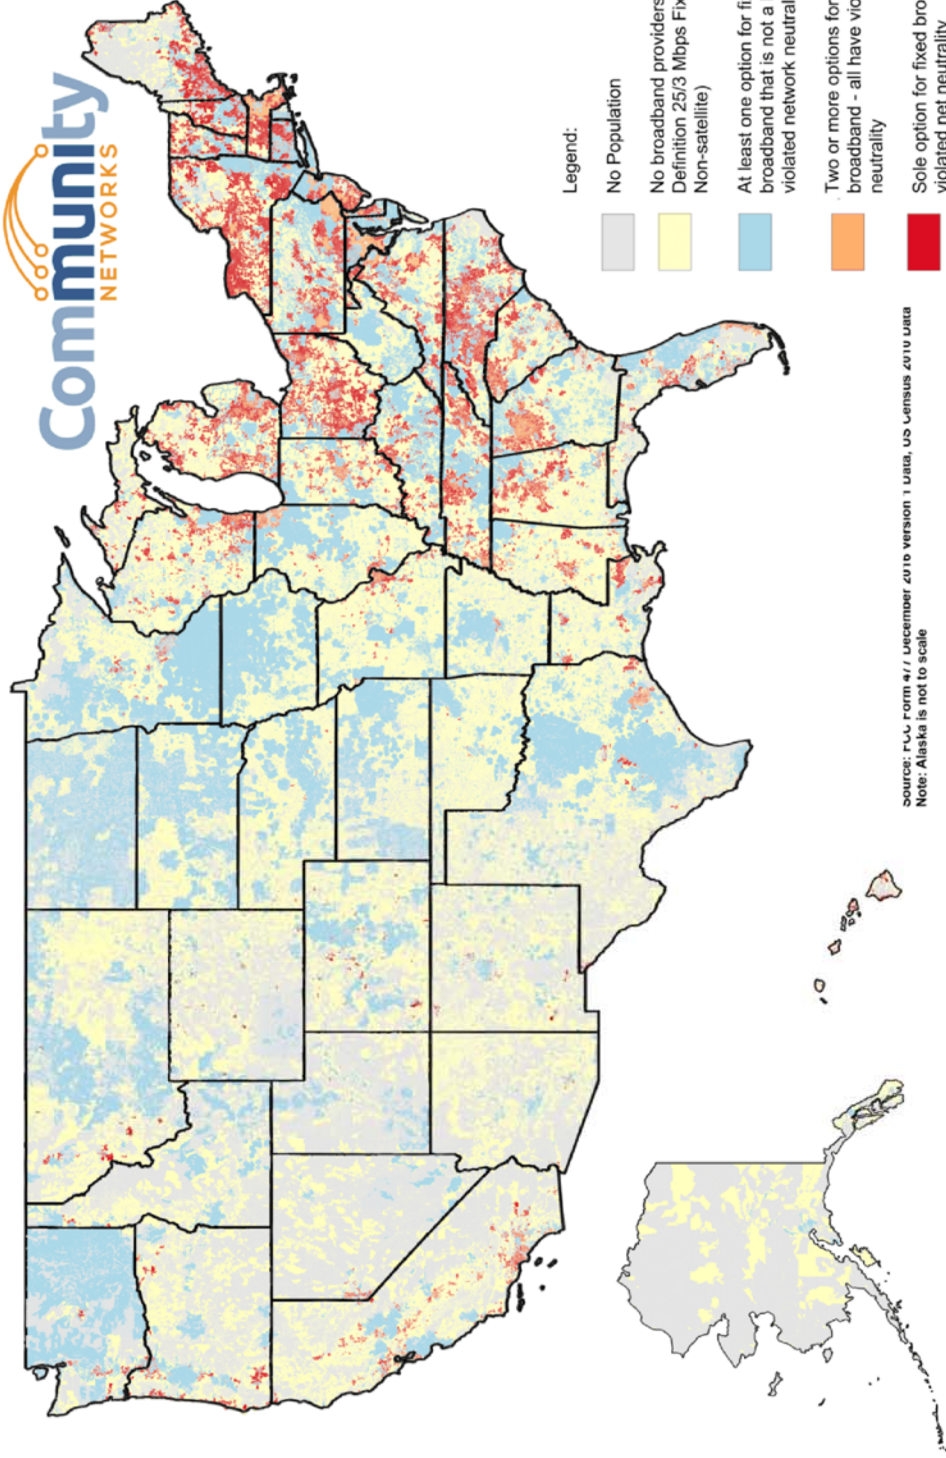

29 million - have no broadband access.

71 million - have one option for broadband access from a known net neutrality violator*

58 million - have two options for broadband access from known net neutrality violators*

129 million Americans are limited to broadband Internet access from known net neutrality violators and will have no protection after repeal. The FCC should focus on local Internet choice, not protecting monopoly power.
