City Seeks Members for Innovation, Energy and Environmental Sustainability Committee

Are you looking for an opportunity to get involved in your community and make a difference? The City of Farmington Hills is seeking volunteers to serve on its new Innovation, Energy and Environmental Sustainability Committee (IEESC).

City officials would like to enhance support for environmental sustainability efforts and explore opportunities that will benefit the entire Farmington Hills/Farmington community. The new committee will research, study, and report to the Mayor and City Council on innovative programs that will promote environmental sustainability. They will also seek out potential public/private partnerships and possible sources of funding.

The IEESC will consist of 11 regular members, including Farmington Hills and Farmington residents, representatives of local businesses, an environmentalist, a utility company representative, a member of the City's Economic Development Corporation, and a student representative. Up to two members may be from the City of Farmington and the committee will also have three alternate members.

If you are interested in serving on the IEESC, please submit a letter of interest and a resume to CMO@fhgov.com. All members of the IEESC will be appointed by Farmington Hills Mayor Vicki Barnett and subject to a majority vote of approval from the City Council.

The IEESC will convene after at least five members have been appointed and approved. The group will meet according to a schedule determined by members. Four months after its first meeting, the IEESC is tasked with issuing a preliminary report to the City containing initial findings and two to three attainable goals based on the purpose and objectives of the committee.
